Description:

This Broad Fork is excellent for low-impact garden bed soil preparation, conditioning, aeration and also can be used for harvesting of root vegetables. Our designs are based off of a design offered by John Jeavons and Stanford University Students as published and offered for anyone to use in Mother Earth News Catalogue 1980. There are several ergonomic advantages over other broad fork designs out there and effectively reduces the effort and strains on the body allowing preparing more soil in less time.

Construction:

Full steel construction with 3/8" X 1 1/4" tines and long handles for heavy duty leverage. Four basic models to choose from to suit the preference of everyone looking for something more than just a garden fork. Main tubing is either .100" or .125" for heavy or .063" for light and mini units. All tine bars are .100 wall tube.
